Of myrrh and frankincense –

More fragrant than all the spices of the merchant.

Like pillars of protection.

With swords to defend the King and His

From every terror of the night.

Out of the finest wood that will not decay.
Pillars of smoke like silver mist –
A canopy of golden glory dwells above it.
The place where they sit together
Is sprinkled with crimson.
Love and mercy cover this carriage,
Blanketing His tabernacle throne.
The King Himself has made it
For those who are His bride!
